COLORADO'S MINING EXHIBIT.

Reports in regard to the character of Colorado's exhibit at the World's Fair appear to be very contradictory. By some it is alleged [illegible] and a credit to the State, while by others it is said to be positively disgraceful. In all probability the truth lies somewhat between the two extremes. When the exhibit is all in place we suspect that the State will be found to have made a very good display in the different departments to which its exhibit is assigned. On the other hand, the separation of the exhibit into these various departments does not permit the proper impression to be made concerning the resources and capacities of the State as a whole. The effort therefore now being made to supplement these with a display in the State building is an eminently wise one.

So much has been said of the mineral wealth and agricultural possibilities of the State that visitors will expect a good deal from it, and her own citizens have such pride and confidence in her that they will be disappointed if she does not exceed her competitors to a marked degree. To present an adequate Colorado display and one that will equal the anticipations is no easy task.

THE GEARY LAW.

Although the Supreme Court yesterday affirmed the constitutionality of the Geary law, the judges entertained a motion for a reconsideration which will have the effect of postponing [illegible] under the law until the motion is decided. It is very fortunate for all concerned that such is the case. The government [illegible] had for many years on its hands such a white elephant as the Geary law is likely to prove. Opposed to all dictates of humanity and morals as well as of justice, its enforcement would not only outrage the moral sense of the civilized world, but would offer difficulties of a most serious kind. Under its provisions all Chinese now residents in the United States who have not been registered must be removed to the country from which they came. The department is without means to enforce the law, and this could be done only at an enormous expense. Furthermore the attempt would doubtless result in retaliation by China and [illegible] would be seriously damaged and American missions severely closed within that country.

The Geary law was inadequately considered and hastily passed. Its presence on the statute books is a disgrace, and its enforcement would be a national crime. No reason yet brought forward for an extra session of Congress has been so good as the repeal of the Geary law. It is greatly to be hoped that the case will be kept open in the Supreme Court until at least the more offensive provisions of the law shall be modified.

THE DEMOCRATIC POLICY.

After a period of delay and hesitation which has served to display the number of hostile elements into which the Democracy is divided, a definite announcement is made of the policy of the new administration and of the objects towards which its efforts are to be directed. These are: first, the repeal of the Federal election laws; second, the levy of an income tax; third, the repeal of the Sherman law and of the tax on State banks currency; and fourth, the revision of the tariff, making a very decided reduction of duties all along the line.

This announcement of the Democratic policy ought at least to put a stop to the foolish talk of which we have heard too much, that there is very little difference between the two great parties outside of the question of officeholding and that it is of very little consequence which way a vote is cast. Outside of the American law repeal, concerning which the difference of opinion is not according to party lines, there is not one of these measures on which the Republican position is not diametrically opposed to that of the lot and a fair count in national elections. It believes that the imposition of an income tax is a cumbersome and needlessly expensive method of taxation, and that its impartial enforcement is a practical impossibility; it imposed the tax on State banks as a preventive against a changeable, unreliable, unsafe form of currency; and it has adopted as a cardinal principle the protection of American workingmen against the competition of pauper foreign labor. It has been a great advantage to the Republicans that they have hitherto been unable to get the Democrats committed to a definite policy. Even the caucus, [illegible] have done so, the outlook, and the efforts of campaign orators and candidates have been largely directed to explaining that they did not mean what they said. The propositions outlined above are consistent with the Chicago platform, and it is to be hoped that the Democrats will hold fast to them. The moment the Democrats adopt a definite policy, the judgment will be Republican victory in the near future.

THE WOMEN'S CONGRESS.

The first of the World's Congresses which are to be held during the progress of the Columbian Exposition is in session this present week. The post of honor was given to the women, and in Washington Hall of the Memorial Art Palace yesterday morning representative women from all over the world inaugurated this unique series of World's Congresses, as well as the particular Congress whose subject was "Woman's Progress."

The proceedings for the first day were of a formal character, consisting in the forenoon of an address of welcome by Mrs. Potter Palmer, president of the Woman's Branch of World's Congress Auxiliary, and Mrs. Chas. Henrotin, the vice president, in address "The World's Congress of Representative Women," by May Wright Sewall, the chairman of [illegible] representative countries, including Canada, England, France, South America, Ireland and Russia. In the afternoon there was a reception to all members of the Congress, and minor receptions by members of the various conference committees and of the foreign delegations. In the evening the introductions and responses of the foreign representatives continued, including delegates from Germany, Belgium, Denmark, Scotland, Sweden, Switzerland, Australia, Finland, Greece, Spain and Bohemia.

To-day the real work of the Congress begins, consisting of the reading of papers and discussions in the main hall and various conference rooms of the departmental congresses in the smaller halls. It would be impracticable to give even a list of the subjects which will be considered during the week. They include every branch of work and thought of especial interest to women, the general grouping being under the eight heads of Education, Industry, Literature and Art, Philanthropy and Charity, Moral and Social Reform, Religion, Civil Law and Law [illegible], Science and Philosophy. At the close of the Congress it is proposed to issue a series of general reports, by which the work accomplished will be preserved in a permanent form.

It is daily growing more evident that there is serious danger of a dull [illegible] the World's Fair, the financial uncertainty, the reduced price of silver are among the reasons given why this will be the case. It is therefore a matter of vital [illegible] State should be increased in all possible ways. An economically good plan is the meeting of representatives of the various chambers of commerce and boards of trade of the State to be held in Pueblo this week to take measures to secure low excursion rates from Chicago to Colorado. Such a meeting ought to have considerable influence with the [illegible] to represent the wishes of the people of the State.

There seems to be good reason for the complaint brought by the foreign exhibitors against the system of awards at the World's Fair. The jury system would be much more likely to secure a fair result and would be more satisfactory than the method with a single judge. However, as the latter plan has been announced by the exposition authorities it is rather late in the day to present objections.

The intemperate criticism of Mr. Gladstone in which Professor Tyndall has been indulging will not help Professor Tyndall's reputation, nor will it advance the cause which he favors. On the other hand it will not do Mr. Gladstone any particular harm. Calling names is poor argument anywhere.

American Boys and American Labor.

The important series of editorial articles in The Century on "Cheap Money" is to be followed by a series in the same department on the "Decline of the American Mechanic and Its Causes." In introducing them the editor says: "Shall American boys be permitted to learn trades, and having learned them, shall they be permitted to work at them? These are apparently simple questions, and the answering of them is an apparently simple matter. Most persons thus interrogated would reply at once, certainly they should. Why do you ask such unnecessary questions? We ask them because under the present conditions of trade instruction and employment in this country the American boy has no rights which organized labor is bound to respect. He is denied instruction as an apprentice, and if he be taught his trade in a trade school he is refused admission to nearly all the trade unions, and is boycotted if he attempts to work as a non-union man. The questions of his character and skill enter into the matter only to discriminate against him. All the trade unions of the country are controlled by foreigners, who comprise the great majority of their members. While they refuse admission to the trained American boy, they admit all foreign artisans with little or no regard to their training or skill. In fact, the doors of organized labor in America, which are closed and barred against American boys, swing open, wide and free, to all foreign comers. Labor in free America is free to all save the sons of Americans.

"These are neither idle nor exaggerated statements. They are sober, solemn truths, expressed with studied moderation. So-called American labor today is a complete hist[illegible]

How has it come about that the United States, alone among the nations of the earth, has not merely surrendered possession of [illegible] to foreigners, but acquiesced when the foreign possessors exclude from that field her own sons?"

INDIAN RIGHTS ESSAYS.

Prizes to be Awarded by the Colorado Association.

The Colorado branch of the Indian Rights Association offers the following prizes:

To students in the public schools of the State the Myron W. Reed prize of $25, given by the members of the First Congregational Church, Denver, for the best essay on "Schools for Indians," and a second prize of $15 for the second best essay.

To students in Colorado colleges and private schools of high grade, the Elizabeth Hall Warren prize of $25, given by Mrs. Warren for the best essay on "How Shall We Civilize the Indians?" and a second prize of $15 for the second best essay.

The essays must be received by the secretary of the Colorado branch of the I. R. A., Miss Helen M. Ingham, M. D., 1621 Gaylord street, Denver, as early as Dec. 1, 1893, and each essay must be accompanied by a sealed envelope containing name, address and school or college of the writer. The secretary will number the essays and its accompanying envelope, and the envelopes will not be opened until the prize essays have been decided upon.

The directors of the Colorado branch will appoint as judges persons whose practical acquaintance with the Indian questions is well known, and as soon as practicable will call a public meeting in Denver at which the prize essays will be read and the prizes will be awarded. For further information and reading matter address the secretary.

What to do with the Indians.

How to take care of the Indians has always been a great question with the government. There are only 216,534 Indians in the country (about as many as there are inhabitants of New Orleans), and it would be an easy matter for the rich government to supply them with a little money and let them take care of themselves. But this would be the worst thing that could happen to them. They are not naturally inclined to work, and if the nation supported them in idleness they would soon begin a more deplorable condition than when they ran wild on the plains. For how many years [illegible] was made with arrows and rifles. Now, however, a more humane and wiser policy is in force, and it is sought to educate and civilize them to such an extent that they will soon mingle with the whole population and become good American citizens.

[illegible] Indians we wish to make their Indian Americans, Commissioner Morgan says. He means that instead of remaining little separate nations, they are to become a part of the great body of people, just as our foreign immigrants do. But it would not do to throw them [illegible] the reservations without preparation. They have no idea of farming, of housekeeping, of home life, of the arts or science, or any of the attributes of civilization. They know nothing about railways or telegraphs, plush sofas or Santa Claus; they cannot, in general, read or write, and most of them cannot speak the English language. To fit them to become citizens they must be educated, and certainly the education must begin with the little Indians.

"Take care of the old Indians and teach the young Indians to take care of themselves. There is the Indian policy in a dozen words. To teach the young Indians there must be schools and teachers, and the Indian Bureau devotes a large part of its time and money to opening and supporting schools for Indian children between the ages of 6 and 16. Among the civilized Indians in the country (this does not include the Alaska Indians) there are [illegible] between these ages, but there are the civilized tribes which educate their own children, and some states (New York, for instance) take care of and [illegible] about thirty-six thousand Indian children to be educated by the national government. Of these, now go to school, and provision has still to be made for the other 21,000. Only 10,000 of these neglected Indian children to be reclaimed from barbarism! How small the number seems when we reflect that New York city alone educates 140,000 children in her public schools."—Harper's Young People.

IRISH CITIZENS PROTEST.

They Object to Furnishing All the Names for Central Park's Animals.

Delegations from five Irish county societies met in Jackson's hall, Third avenue and forty-fourth street, to express their indignation at the recent action of the Central park commissioners. The meeting was called by the Mayo men.

There were about 250 people in the hall when President Joseph F. Healey, of the Mayo men, took the chair. Among them were representatives of the Kerry men, the Clare men, the Derry men and the Longford men. President Healey said:

"You all know what we are here for. It is in protest against a great indignity that has been put upon us. It is an indignity that must be resented, and we as Irishmen will, and that it is to be done, I now introduce to you Mr. T. T. Tuney, who will make a few remarks."

Mr. Tuney said: "It is infamous for any body of men [illegible] to call Irishmen monkeys, apes, hogs and hippopotami after St. Michael, St. Patrick and St. Andrew. I am here to-day as one of you to protest against this grinning habit of the park authorities, and I think you will echo me when I say that it must stop. Why should [illegible] name the animals in Irish? What is that as compared with a new animal is added to the collection at the park? Does anybody when coming around for a name ever think of suggesting anything but an Irishman? It must be Murphy, Crowley or something like that, or else the animal is nameless. It is a shame that our race should be treated so, and I propose to work with the rest of you to bring about a reform."

Mr. Tuney was loudly applauded, and then Mr. John McNamee was introduced.

"This matter," said Mr. McNamee, "is one which must not be overlooked any longer. We have stood the outrage as long as decent people should, and the time has come for us to rise and stamp out this indignity which has been perpetrated upon us. The people cannot refuse to hear us. They must hear us. We come as respectable people to protest against monkeys and snakes being named after our ancestors, whom we revere and respect.

Mr. P. F. Sweeley said: "When the Democrats asked us for our votes, we gave them to them willingly, and, when we as representative Irish-Americans ask that this insult we resent out we should be met courteously by those in power. I have no doubt my call but what our demands will be heeded to, and in a very short time I think that what we now regard as an insult will be but a memory of the past."

Mr. P. Mahoney said: "I am very proud to be allowed to take up the cause of Ireland in this matter. I for one have felt my flesh creep when mention has been made of some strange animal or sea lion being called Mr. Murphy, Mr. O'Brien or Mr. Crowley. It is a shame that an attempt should be made in our respected parklands to make a laughing stock of the Irish people."

Mr. John Mullryan made a speech which [illegible] Nichol got up. Mr. McNichol said that he felt that Ireland did enough for the city in the way of taxes without being called upon to supply names for a menagerie of monkeys and other animals. Mr. McNichol also said that almost every Irish name imaginable had been tried on to be applied whether it was a white out or a monkey.

Mr. [illegible] said: "We [illegible] Irish boycotted this way in America. It was an Irishman who discovered this country. Four hundred years before Columbus set foot in America, St. Brendan of County Kerry came here. Instead of merely requesting that the animals' names be changed, we demand it. We have more right here, anyway, than those whose independence is taken from other countries."

Many of the Englishmen shouted some [illegible] at which there was great laughter.

"They said to call that hippopotamus John Bull instead of Miss Murphy," said somebody else, and there was more laughter and applause.—New York Sun.

Blind to Their Eyes.

More than 30 years ago, J. M. Wallace published a letter from a California correspondent in which said that the hooded toad squirted poisonous oil into eyes of bright red, much like blood. Of course everybody thought it was a Californian yarn. Now, Mr. O. P. Hay has proved that horned toads do spirt a red liquid from their eyes when vexed, and that the liquid is blood.

AN EPOCH IN JOURNALISM.

The New York Sunday Press is regularly publishing an Art Cover in seven colors.

On Sunday, March 12th, the Sunday Press (New York), started a feature that will mark an epoch in American journalism. It consists of an Art Cover, in which the paper which followed to the quarter, she increased, and it has created an unprecedented demand for the Sunday Press among all classes of people.

The front page of the Art Cover next Sunday, will show a beautiful reproduction of the German masterpiece, "St. Cecilia," and for the four Sundays in April it will present an exquisite water color design with an art calendar, final painting in the original colors by an eminent American artist, and two reproductions of famous paintings, admitted masterpieces, inside pages of the Art Cover will always contain exquisite half-tone portraits and illustrations of people and topics of the day current week.

The Sunday Press would cost $4.00 a year if it were not for the Sunday Press. Order of your newsdealer or newsboy, or address the Sunday Press office, Tribune Building, New York.

This camp has been wonderfully developed during the past year, so to-day there are at least fifty mines that have been and are shipping pay ore to the stamp mills and smelters, and hundreds of good prospects that are pushing development work daily, so that by the time the railroads are completed into this camp many of them will doubtless be shipping properties of pay ore.

The Lucky Bonanza Stamp Mill is now completed, with all the known modern improvements for treating low grade ores successfully, and will begin operations May 1st, treating a hundred tons of ore per day.

The future of this camp is assured. We believe this is a good time to make profitable investments in many of the Good Mining Stocks of this camp, and will take pleasure in furnishing the best information we have regarding the different properties. Call on or address

A VISITING PRINCESS.

The Spanish court was always noted for its punctilious etiquette. All the school histories of a generation ago used to contain the story of the Spanish king who was burned to death because it was not proper for him to remove himself away from a hot stove. A modern instance of the same devotion to the forms of court ceremony is found in the discussions which have preceded the visit of the Infanta Eulalia to this country, concerning her proper reception and treatment. One might think that a visitor from a foreign country would be interested in manners of republican simplicity and in the contrast which they present with those of the Old World. The Spanish grandees, however, have no such curiosity. They intend that the Infanta shall be treated with all the courtesy due her exalted rank, and to ensure this they even took steps to find out the manner of her reception before announcing definitely that her visit would take place.

The chief point of discussion was whether after the Princess reached Washington and made a formal call upon the President, Mr. Cleveland would return the call in due form. As it is announced that the Princess is on her way, the Washington government must have found it possible to give satisfactory assurances, a conclusion which is of course eminently satisfactory to the two nations.

The Infanta Eulalia, the distinguished visitor who is making so much trouble, is an aunt of the 7-year-old king who now holds right to the Spanish throne. She is the youngest of the three sisters of Alfonso XII, the late king, is 29 years old and was married some seven years ago to the Duke of Montpensier. But in addition to her own dignities the Infanta also claims precedence as the personal representative of her sister-in-law, the Queen Regent, Maria Christina, the mother of the boy king. We trust that the Princess will receive all the consideration to which she is entitled, and that she may be delighted with her trip to the new world.

AN EXPERIMENT IN SUFFRAGE.

As an outcome of the recent disturbances in Belgium that country will soon inaugurate an experiment in suffrage, which will be watched with interest by all free peoples. On April 15 the Belgian Chambers passed the Nyssen bill whose provisions are summarized as follows: Every male Belgian who has reached the 25th year of his age and has lived for one year in an election district is entitled to vote, unless he has been deprived of his rights of citizenship for criminal actions. A citizen over 35 years of age, who is married or who is a widower with children, shall be entitled to an additional vote if his direct personal taxes amount to at least 5 francs ($1). A citizen of 25 owning real estate valued at not less than 200 francs ($40) or drawing interest to the amount of not less than 100 francs ($20) on government bonds, or government savings banks, shall be entitled to another vote. A citizen of 25 who has passed college examinations, or is in a position which cannot be held without such examinations, will also have an additional vote. No one is to have more than three votes, and voting will be obligatory.

The most striking feature of the new law is that which gives extra votes to taxpayers and property owners. This is a curious modification of the principle of universal suffrage, and one whose value can only be determined by actual experiment.

A railway train will always be ahead of a steamship in point of speed; but steamships are now reaching velocities that would once have been considered very respectable even for railway trains. Some of the new cruisers of the United States will be able to steam at a rate of twenty miles an hour, and some of the torpedo boats considerably excel this. The fastest merchant vessel in the world is undoubtedly the new Cunarder Campania, which recently made the trip from New York to Liverpool in five days, seventeen hours and twenty-seven minutes, the fastest eastward passage on record. Her fastest day's sailing was 517 miles, an average of 22½ miles an hour. The driving of a great vessel 620 feet in length, through the waters at that rate of speed is certainly a wonderful accomplishment. Of course as a matter of speed it does not compare with the railway record, but under its peculiar conditions the accomplishment of the Campania is worthy to be set along side of the 82 second mile of the New York Central express as among the great feats of the Columbian year.

Monday is minister's holiday, and the Denver ministers this week showed their appreciation of the fact by indulging in a game of baseball. In so doing they not only secured a considerable amount of amusement for themselves, but gave much more amount to others. The reporters especially seem to have been happy at the reversal of the usual conditions and improved their opportunity to the utmost. When the minister is in the pulpit and the reporter has to sit meekly and quietly in the pew, the latter is at a disadvantage, but when the minister stands up in his shirt sleeves with a bat in his hand, the conditions are reversed. However, no harm was done anywhere, and the game seems to have been enjoyed by all concerned, ministers, reporters and public, in the same hearty, good natured fashion.

There is some talk of war with China as a result of an attempt to enforce the Geary law. We do not believe that such an occurrence is likely, although critical conditions may easily arise both on account of the Geary law and of the retaliatory measures which China may be likely to adopt. It is probable, however, that a strict policy of non interference will be put into effect. American commercial interests in China will be completely destroyed, no doubt much to the satisfaction of others nations who are our commercial rivals, and American missionaries will be forced to withdraw from the country. While those of our countrymen who wish to make a fortune quickly and dishonestly will be unable to do so.

The preliminary bulletin of the Summer School, mention of which has already been made in these columns, has now made its appearance and can be obtained by application to Professor Dye, at the High School or to Mr. N. The bulletin, although quite small, sets forth in attractive detail the various good things for those who will be fortunate enough to participate in it. The management of the school are certainly meeting with remarkable success in securing instructors of the highest rank and they deserve the most liberal support from the community.

The advocates of Sunday opening seem to have won a decisive victory and it is announced that the Fair will open on Sunday, the same as any other day with the exception that the machinery will not be in motion, and that the money given by Congress will be returned. If the Fair is to be open on Sundays at all, this is the best way to do it. It is contrary to the wishes of the American people as expressed through their representatives in Congress, but at least there is nothing sneaking about it as there was in the other plans proposed.

The number of the Chicago Graphic for April 15 contains a well written and handsomely illustrated article on the State University of Colorado. There is abundant reason for pride on the part of all citizens of the State both in the attractiveness and beauty of the location and in the excellent character of the work which is being done under the direction of President Baker.

A School With a Future.

The Colorado Summer School of Colorado Springs will hold its second session next [illegible] not yet to be announced. The statement will be greeted with interest by the many who found the school helpful last year, and by many more who have heard of the results already attained. Colorado Springs is an ideal place for such an institution, and there will be [illegible] of those who attend the session. The people of Colorado Springs [illegible] pride in the school and great things may be predicted for the future.—[Denver Times.

Table Decoration.

The fashion of beautifying the table, which in these days is carried to such an extent, is by no means so original as many think it to be. It is simply the revival of a revived custom. We are told that in France when the great joints grew elaborate and small dishes took their place decorations of the table changed too. Permanent pieces called "surtouts," or "surtouts," made of crystal and mounted in silver were placed in the middle of the table, and from them branched candelabra of gilt and silver, [illegible] with flowers, [illegible] covered with sweetmeats, or here and there statuettes.

Finally the surtout grew so large that it almost covered the table. People at last grew tired of the monotony of this ornament, no matter how artistic it might be, and instead the center of the table was often covered with a layer of potter's clay, in which a florist would set cut flowers in any design that pleased him. Artists were often employed to decorate the table the center of which would be covered with temples, bridges, amphitheaters or emblematic groups of figures, all made of paste.

Sometimes the artist would represent a landscape covered with snow. M. Carada invented an artificial hoar frost, which was melted by the heat of the room, during which process the guests saw the thawing of the river and the budding of the trees and flowers as spring succeeded winter. There were also the "tableaux," who, by means of beautifully colored sands, powdered marbles, ground glass, beads and bread crumbs, made very ingenious figures upon the table cloths.—[Harper's Bazar.

Hydrophobia Nothing but Fear.

Says a medical practitioner of long experience: "I believe that a good many people who are supposed to die of hydrophobia scare themselves to death. They are bitten by a dog—perfectly harmless dog, usually—and they brood over it and worry about it until they develop all the symptoms of hydrophobia. I should test every case of alleged poisoning by rabies by putting the patient under chloroform and watching him during the stupor when he was coming out of it. If the convulsions continued then the case would be genuine, but it is [illegible] it. Dog bites are the commonest of injuries. Even a rabid dog may bite a man without producing any ill effects."—New York Sun.

RELICS OF COLUMBUS

TO BE SEEN AT THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

It Is Reproduced in Exact Size at the World's Fair and Is an Object of Special Interest to Visitors—Homage Paid to Columbus in the Way of Statuary.

World's Fair, May 18.—[Special.] If Christopher Columbus could return to earth and pass a day in Jackson park he would forgive those ungrateful countrymen of his who put him in chains and the unfortunate world which was so slow in acknowledging his unparalleled service to civilization. Not only is this great exposition named after the discoverer, and held to commemorate the fourth centenary of his most noted voyage, but his spirit dominates everything. It is to him that these modern men in adoration and praise with their paint brush and modeling tool, their pouting and statuary. It is indeed the Columbian fair. Pleasant indeed to the eyes of the Duke of Veragua must have been these manifestations of homage to his great ancestor.

When the visitor who comes by elevated railway or excursion train leaves the magnificent terminal station and first casts his eager glance about the White City, his attention is at once attracted by the golden models of the caravels which brought Columbus to these shores, now poised high in the air at the top of a [illegible] poles in the midst surrounding the crown like Administration building. Gaily they ride the breeze on the sides in their lofty perches, reminding the visitor at the very outset of the historical event in whose honor this whole enterprise was undertaken. From other points the yellow and red banners of Castile and Aragon, the principalities which formed Spain, fly in the breeze. Ferdinand and Isabella, and thus prepared the way for Columbus and his quest in the service of these sovereigns. In front of the Administration building stands a statue of Columbus upon a lofty pedestal, in the grandest spot of the great central court where beauty all the world will soon be prodigal.

Chicago, in her eagerness to build, conquer, attract and profit has by no means [illegible] Spain were not. In the most conspicuous place of the central part of the city of Chicago, in the "lake front" park which was originally designed to be the site of this exposition, directly in front of the famous Auditorium, stands a bronze Columbus unveiled two weeks ago. It was the work of a successful American sculptor, Howard Kryt Ignatius, and its cost was defrayed by the municipality and the management of the exposition jointly. In front of Chicago's city hall stands a handsome drinking fountain named for Columbus and ornamented with another statue of the discoverer.

Returning to the exposition, the sculptured or painted Columbus is seen on every hand. His bust is in niche, his portrait in oil, his full figure in bronze or in marble, or his discovery portrayed in mural painting. Columbus is a favorite theme with artists from all over the world—the nations vie in rendering him homage.

At the most impressive point of the exposition, the water entrance, stands still another Columbus. Crowning the noble Columbian arch of the Corinthian style, surrounded by heroic figures typical of the races of man, is the Quadriga, already known far and near as one of the most beautiful decorations of the exposition. He is here represented as riding in the chariot of a conqueror drawn by four horses, each animal led by a goddess. Victory, history, art and industry join to lead Columbus in triumph back to the world which his faith and daring brought within the domain of civilization. It was a beautiful conception and has been splendidly executed.

Within gunshot of the Quadriga stands one of the most interesting structures in this aggregation of the marvelous. It is the Convent of La Rabida, reproduced here in a full-sized and accurate model. So well has the work been done that at first glance travelers who have visited Spain are startled at what seems to them to be the old convent itself transplanted by some modern Rip Van Winkle from its rocky home in Spain to the shore of Lake Michigan. It stands just south of the great pier and [illegible] building, occupying a little corner of its own where it was believed it would be comparatively safe from harm by fire should the disaster of a general conflagration ever overtake the World's fair. This precaution was taken on account of the precious nature of the Columbus relics and documents which the convent is the repository. The same anxiety to guard against accident led the United States authorities to promise Spain that if the precious relics were sent across the sea they should be guarded by military. A promise that has been faithfully kept and night or day Uncle Sam's blue-coats patrol the ancient structure, indoors and out.

La Rabida has a history not less stormy than that of Columbus himself. According to tradition it was built in the halcyon days of Rome to commemorate the virtues of a daughter of the Emperor Trajan, and it was for a long time a noted retreat of criminals or persecuted persons fleeing for life. Once a year two maidens were sacrificed on the altar, and from an examination of their entrails the soothsayers were able to foretell famine, war or pestilence. It was in time a Christian church, a Moslem mosque, and a chapter-house of the Knights Templar. In the present century it degenerated into a resort for gypsies, beggars and all sorts of vagrants and wanderers. Finally it became a sort of sheepfold, and was not restored to its present state of good preservation till the Queen Dowager of France, visiting it forty years ago, started a subscription list for its rehabilitation.

Four hundred and eight years ago occurred the most memorable event in the history of the ancient monastery. Columbus and his son Diego, then nine years old, passed before its walls. They were weary and hungry, and the boy knocked at the door. Juan Perez, the prior, gave them shelter, and becoming interested in his guests [illegible] audience at court. The visit of Columbus to Rabida was a crisis in his career and in the history of the world, and therefore appropriate it is that a model of the monastery should serve here as a sort of Columbian museum.

No visitor will want to leave the World's Fair without seeing this relic. It is surprising that so many souvenirs of the discovery could have been gathered together at this late day. The anchor which Columbus says he lost in the harbor of San Domingo, and which was afterward recovered from the ocean bed, is here. During one of his discoveries Columbus founded in the West Indies the first American city and named it Isabella. The United States government sent a commission to locate the site of Isabella, to figure as much of it as might be possible, and reproduce the whole at the fair. There was little difficulty in finding the site, and there were no remains of an ancient form or antiquity to be worth restoration or reproduction. Nothing was found but the foundations of a few rude stone walls, and these were in a sadly scattered condition. Some of these stones were brought away and may be seen in Rabida—mute witnesses of the first known efforts of Europeans to construct a town in the western world.

There are many other relics of Columbus, among them a bell which he brought from Spain to Isabella, a stone and a font of the first chapel he proposed building at Isabella, a stone and a font of the first chapel he built, autograph letters written by the discoverer, armor, equipment and articles of personal use. An assortment of the trinkets used by him in his barter with the Indians is not without interest. These are beads, knives, nails, mirrors, cloths and combs. There are models of the house in which Columbus died, and of the coffin in which his remains are now believed to repose in the cathedral at Santo Domingo. A report was published a few days ago that an attempt had been made to steal the remains of Columbus from Rabida, but this was an obvious error, for the remains of Columbus are not at the exposition and no pretense has ever been made that they are there.

There is a model of the house in which Columbus was born, and a series of pictures representing every important incident of his career. Among these is a [illegible] of the coffin of Ferdinand and Isabella, and the coffin of Columbus. It is from the discovery and the same Columbus returning from a later voyage in chains.

In another part of the convent is shown a fac simile of the room in which Columbus and his son rested on the occasion of their memorable visit in 1485. Near by are the cells which the monks occupied, their walls artfully discolored in imitation of the stains of antiquity. The illusion is somewhat marred by the use to which the cells are now put; they are sleeping rooms for the soldiers who stand guard over these precious relics.

If any one wishes to select for himself the portrait of Columbus which in his judgment is most likely to be the true one, he may do so from an array of half a hundred reprints. As is well known, no authenticated portrait of Columbus exists, though in favor of one or two paintings there is strong circumstantial evidence. If one could discover in some Spanish ruin a portrait of Columbus about whose authenticity there was no lingering doubt, he could consider his fortune made, for probably he could sell it for half a million dollars. The chances are that if such a discovery were made and the painting brought to Chicago it would never be suffered to leave. If money could buy it, in Chicago it would remain.

Even now there is discussion of a proposed temple to the memory of Columbus to be erected in Chicago, either on the site of the present exposition or elsewhere in the city. The designs for the temple have been prepared in Italy, and photographs of them are now in Chicago. If erected it will at once take rank as one of the most beautiful structures in the world. It will be a marble colonnade of classic design, and in and about it the progressive story of Columbus' great career will be told in a series of sculptured figures. This temple will not be erected till after the exposition shall have closed. While not much is known as yet as to the plans of its projector, it is believed the beautiful memorial will be presented to Chicago by King Humbert of Italy as a mark of the pride felt in the [illegible] of which he was a native.

AN EPOCH IN JOURNALISM.

The New York Sunday Press is regularly publishing an Art Cover in seven colors.

On Sunday, March 12, the Sunday Press (New York) started a feature that will mark an epoch in American Journalism. It consists of an Art Cover, in which the paper when folded to the quarter size, is spread, and it has created an unprecedented demand for the Sunday Press among all classes of people.

The front page of the Art Cover, next Sunday, will show a beautiful reproduction of the German masterpiece, "St. Cecilia," and for the four Sundays in April it will present an original water-color design with an art colony, as artistical painting in the original colors by an eminent American artist, and two reproductions of famous paintings, admitted masterpieces. The inside pages of the Art Cover will always contain exquisite half-tone portraits and illustrations of people and topics of the then current week.

Every copy of the Art Cover of any issue of the Sunday Press would sell for ten cents if it was not at least $1.
